

FAMINE IS ABROAD IN RED RUSSIAS

Population Dying By Thousands in Bolshevik Countries.

DOG FLESH IN IS DEMAND

London, March 11.—Starvation prevails throughout Bolshevik Russia, and is killing off the population by thousands. Diseases due to undernourishment are rampant, and food is so scarce in Petrograd and Moscow that cats sell readily for $3 each. The undertakers cannot cope with conditions as there is not enough wood for coffins.

These reports have been brought to the attention of the British Government within the last week by British subjects recently returned from Russia. Several of the Britishers have lived nearly all their lives in Russia, and left Russia because of the intolerable conditions.

Their evidence is unanimous that the food situation is indescribably terrible, and that if means are not found to alleviate it the inhabitants of Bolshevik Russia may starve to death. The Britishers say that the plight of Russia is a direct result of the reign of anarchy and terror instituted by Lenin and Trotsky. They declare that the Russian problem has ceased to be a political question, and has become a question of common humanity.

Thousands are dying daily in the great centers of population like Petrograd, Moscow, Kiev and Odessa. In Petrograd alone the deaths from famine three weeks ago numbered 200 daily. Typhoid or "hunger typhus" is carrying off young and old everywhere, and in Moscow glanders is epidemic.

Meat, milk and vegetables command enormous prices when they can be obtained. Horse meat sells for the normal equivalent of $10 a pound and dog flesh can be had at from $2.50 to $3.50 a pound.

AMERICA TO GUIDE DESTINY OF WORLD.

"On America, now that the war is over, the destiny of civilization may hang for the next century," said John Galsworthy English novelist and playwright, in a speech yesterday in the great hall of the College of the City of New York, to the faculty and students of the institution, according to the New York Herald.

The speaker was introduced by Lewis Freeman Mott, professor of English literature.

"We English speaking nations are by chance, as it were, the balancing power—the ballast—of the future," Mr. Galsworthy continued. "It is absolutely for the happiness of the world that we should remain united. The comradeship that we now feel must and surely shall abide. For unless we work together and in no selfish or exclusive spirit—good-bye to civilization! It will vanish like the dew off grass. The betterment not only of America and the British nation, but of all mankind, is and must be our object."

"America is yet on the threshold. Is she to step out into the sight of the world as a great leader? That is for America the long decision, to be worked out, not so much in her Senate and her Congress as in her homes and schools. If America does not solve the problems of town life, of capital and labor, of the distribution of wealth, of national health and attain to mastery over inventions and machinery she is in for a cycle of mere anarchy, disruption and dictatorships, into which we shall all follow. Underneath surface differences and irritations we English speaking peoples are fast bound together. May it not be in misery and iron? If America walks upright so shall we; if she goes bowed under weight of machines, money and materialism we, too, shall creep our ways. We run a long race, we nations; a generation is but a day. But a day one may leave the track and never again recover it."

PROSPERITY FORECAST BY POSTAL REVENUES.

Washington.—Postmaster General Burleson to-day declared that increasing postal revenues, "one of the most accurate barometers of present business conditions," forecast a period of pronounced industrial prosperity.

"I concur in the opinion of the executive head of one of the greatest corporations of the world who prophesies 'large business prosperity ahead,'" Mr. Burleson said. "Admittedly the revenue of the postal service is one of the most accurate barometers of present business conditions, because the postal service comes from every community in the United States."

"During November there was a pronounced decline in postal revenues due to the nation-wide prevalence of influenza and the signing of the armistice. Revenues in December showed a returning movement toward normal conditions, while during January and February the revenues greatly exceeded for those months the average annual increase during the last thirty years."

"Judged, therefore, by the reliable business barometer of the postal service, it is obvious that, notwithstanding the fear of business depression expressed in some quarters, this country is on the threshold of a period of pronounced industrial prosperity."

MRS. JOSIE EDMONSON DIES.

Mrs. Josie Edmonson, wife of J. W. Edmonson, of Cleveland, W. Va., died Thursday, March 6, of nervous breakdown. She had been ill some two weeks. Mrs. Edmonson was 59 years of age and formerly lived at Horton, this county. She was a sister of the Thompson brothers at Horton and of A. V. Thompson, President of the Kentucky Clothing Company, at Louisville. Her remains were brought to Ohio County for burial. The funeral was preached at Bethel Sunday evening by Rev. W. C. Franks, of Greenville, with interment in the Bethel cemetery. She is survived by a husband, one son, Emmet Edmonson, and one daughter, Mrs. Blanche Fenwick.

HORSE SALES IN HARTFORD.

Western horses are becoming so numerous that one on first glance ask Hartford to be the adjunct of some western corral. As soon as the ban was lifted, and even before it was lifted, the owners of the famous brands of steeds from the plains were prancing them up and down the streets to the tune of the auctioneer's voice, and it seems that the people of the County are becoming pretty well supplied with the big animals from the wild and woolly country. A sale was held here last week and another Monday and a number of horses were disposed of. The horses are large in form and well-proportioned and if they work as well as they look the people are getting some bargains. If not, then—well, they are getting some horses anyway.

DAYLIGHT SAVING LAW WILL STAND.

Washington.—Failure of congress before the final adjournment to take action on pending bills providing for repeal of the daylight saving act made certain that the nation's clocks again would be advanced an hour during the period between the last Sunday in March and the last Sunday in October.

Opposition of farming interests to the daylight saving act on the grounds that it was of no benefit to the people of rural communities led to the introduction of several bills providing for its repeal, but all of them failed.

IN LOVING MEMORY

Of Sudie Phelps, who died Feb. 9, 1919. She was born July 12, 1896 and died of the flu. She leaves a husband and two children to mourn her loss. She died leaving sweet assurance that she was going to heaven and asking her husband to meet her there. May God's richest blessings be with the bereaved family.

A SISTER IN CHRIST, MAMIE NELSON.

MRS. M. L. HEAVEN TRIES TO SHOOT CHAS. TURNER.

Quite a furore of excitement was created here last Friday when Mrs. M. L. Heaven, wife of the well-known local attorney, fired three shots at Mr. Chas. Turner, apparently with the intention of shooting him in the body. Mr. Turner, who was buying some cattle in town, was standing in front of the Commercial Hotel when Mrs. Heaven approached him and fired one shot, which missed him. He struck her arm with his cane and she fired a second shot which also missed the mark. He then grappled with her, trying to take the pistol away from her, when she fired the third shot, which passed through his coat and overcoat but did not injure him. He then seized the gun and leveled it on Mr. Heaven who was coming down the street from his office. Mr. Heaven stopped. Mr. Turner declared he believed Mr. Heaven was coming to the aid of his wife. Mr. Heaven and Mr. Turner had a few minutes before engaged in a quarrel which would have probably resulted in bloodshed had not Mr. E. G. Barrass separated the men. Mr. Heaven went on to his office but Mr. Turner stayed in front of the hotel where he was when Mrs. Heaven fired when she approached him.

This trouble is the result of some depositions that were taken in the suit filed by Mrs. Oma Turner against Mrs. Mary Heaven, charging alienation. It is said Mr. Turner made statements somewhat derogatory of Mrs. Heaven and woman-like, she decided to set things right.

HOW TO GET YOUR BONUS.

Several soldiers who have recently been discharged and noticed the article in last week's Herald stating that they were entitled to a bonus of $60 in addition to their regular pay, have called at our office and asked us how to go about securing the money. For the convenience of those who may not know, who live in Ohio County, we are giving this instruction. Mr. E. G. Barrass, the local chairman of the Civilian Relief Committee, is prepared to write the letters of those who will bring him their discharge papers or orders of discharge. Some soldiers received a discharge and others received only an order of discharge. If you received a discharge, bring it to Mr. Barrass or Miss Elizabeth Moore, at Mr. Barrass' office, and they will write the letter to the War Department. If you received an order of discharge, send it along or bring it. If you received both, bring both. These must be sent to the War Department at Washington and will be returned to the holder after the bonus is secured. Several have written letters to the War Department without enclosing their discharge and must not be disappointed when they receive the letters back without the bonus. Apply to Mr. Barrass who will prepare your letter in the proper form. His services are absolutely free to all who care to use him.

SYRIAN RELIEF OFFERING.

The fourth Sunday will be observed by the churches of all denominations in Ohio County as the day for an offering to be taken for the relief of the Armenians and Syrians and the other suffering millions of the near east. Rev. A. D. Litchfield, the county chairman, is taken in every church in the county preparing to see that an offering be taken where an service is held if possible. This is indeed a worthy cause and we hope the Christian people of the county will give of their bounty liberally.

ROAD TAX FAILS TO CARRY.

The twenty-cent road tax question, submitted to the voters of Ohio County last Saturday, was defeated by something like two hundred votes on the face of returns. However, there was a somewhat digress vote to the last one in that several precincts that voted against it before were for it this time. Hartford, including east and west Hartford, gave the tax a majority of two votes. Fordsville voted strongly for it as did Weaver Dam and Centertown. Horse Branch, Rosine and a number of other precincts went against it. The day was very gloomy and exceptionally wet and this was a reason for a small vote being polled. There would probably have been a larger majority one way or the other if the weather had not been so inclement.

TRUE TO HIS FIRST LOVE AND LEAVES HER FORTUNE.

Providence, R. I.—"I shall never marry another woman," Charles Wallace told the sweetheart of his boyhood, Miss Nancy Butler, when she broke off their engagement in New Bedford many years ago.

Miss Butler soon after moved to Providence, where she was twice married, being now Mrs. Nancy Irving.

A few days ago two men called on her and notified her that Wallace had died in Manchester, N. H., a wealthy bachelor, and that in his will he had made a bequest of $10,000 and his auto to the woman he had loved in his youth.

"I was a little older than Charley," she explained, "and the thought came to me that naturally a woman ages faster than a man and that the time might come when regrets might be entertained. I put the matter up to Charlie as well as I could, and despite his protests the match was broken. He declared that he would never marry any other woman."

MANY TROOPS ARE ASSEMBLED IN BERLIN.

Basle, Switzerland.—Government troops have been assembled in Berlin to the number of 28,000, according to advices from the German capital received here.

It was announced at Monday's meeting of the Berlin Workmen's Councils that the railway men in Central Germany had declared for a general strike.

The Bourgeois Committee in Leipzig has issued a manifesto declaring that the bourgeois strike will be maintained until order is completely restored. The doctors of the city announce that they will refuse to perform services until the lighting, heating, water, food and street-car services are guaranteed. The Workers' Council, it is stated, promised to make every effort to restore the gas and electric services.

Grave incidents, including loot, are reported from Magdeburg and Hanover.

OLATON

Farmers of this place have been very busy burning plant beds, preparing for another big tobacco crop. Mrs. Albert Daniel and Miss Clida Cooks have returned from Louisville where Mrs. Daniel has been getting her new spring hats.

Mr. Clyde Monroe's are moving on the farm of Mr. Hiram Monroe, near Olaton.

Misses Hattie May and Hester Lynch who have been sick are slowly improving.

Miss Elsie Ford, of Friedland, has been visiting her brother, Mr. Cullie Ford.

Mr. Elvis Grant who has been over seas is at Camp Taylor and is expected home soon.

"HEADS ODDLY STRUNG."

(By Author of Former Illusion) Autos are about to run all winter without a road tax. Let's have an altogether push and get up $1,000 to pay for another tax election. Why not have another year's rest before the next road tax election?

The defeat of the road tax is mighty sweet to some but mighty hard on the white-shirted gang.

If there was any road tax campaigning it was thin stuff—no results.

People will read facts such as the above in spite of the title or headline. Several read the article before under the above title.

THE OLD RAIL FENCE.

A real old time rail fence that old indeed stands on the farm of Mr. G. J. Christian, near Horse Branch. It consists of about thirty-five panels eight rail in height, and was built by Mr. Christian's father, S. M. Christian, before the Civil War. The elder Mr. Christian chopped the trees and split the rails out of which the fence was made in the days before the war. The fence is still sound and serves as well as a new one.

SOLDIERS' LIVES ARE NEEDLESSLY THROWN AWAY

Grave Charges are Made in the Canadian House of Commons By Minister.

BLAMES AMBITIOUS OFFICERS

Toronto.—All Canada has been stirred by charges made in the House of Commons by Sam Hughes, former Minister of Militia, that officers commanding the Dominion's forces in France had needlessly sacrificed the lives of their men in order to advance themselves. Although his allegations were assumed to refer to Sir Arthur Currie Commander-in-Chief of the Canadian forces, there is apparent strong inclination in many quarters to disagree with him. Soldiers who served overseas already have taken up the cudgels in support of General Currie.

Sir Sam opened his attack with the announcement that he had protested several times to Premier Borden "against the waste of Canadian boys' lives in unnecessary stunts on the battlefield." He then read a letter he had sent to Sir Robert protesting against what he termed needless slaughter at Cambrai and stating that he had drawn attention of the Prime Minister on previous occasions to the "massacres at Lens, Passchendaele, etc., where the only apparent object was to glorify the General in command and make it impossible, through butchery, to have a fifth and sixth division and two army corps."

He declared that any General who would undertake the attack at Cambrai by stubborn or street fighting should be court-martialed. The same was true, he said, of the officer who had ordered the storming of Mons four hours before the signing of the armistice. This he characterized as a bit of theatrical display which had cost the lives of many fine Canadian boys who could ill be spared.

Some of the newspapers hint that Sir Sam's attack was inspired by chagrin at the failure of his son, Gen. Garnet Hughes, to get to France as the commander of a 5th brigade of Canadians, but all are unanimous in their assertion that the charges call for an immediate and thorough investigation. Gen. Currie was an appointee of Sir Sam's when he was Minister of Militia.

Sir Sam also made a bitter attack on Sir Joseph Flavelle, head of the Imperial Munitions Board, and president of the William Davies Company, a big Canadian packing concern with branches in some United States cities. The company's profits in the Canadian branches were investigated some time ago by a royal commission, but Sir Sam declared that the operations of the company in the United States should be looked into and asserted that Sir Joseph had made $5,000,000 a month on contracts for meat products for his company by virtue of the influence he was able to wield as head of the Imperial Munitions Board, and that he had made profits of $100,000,000 during the four years of the war. Sir Joseph has issued a categorical denial to the ex-Minister's charges.

LADIES OF HARTFORD ATTENTION.

Mr. W. W. Browder wishes every lady in Hartford, who is interested in the welfare of our community and the building up of our little city, to meet him at the Red Cross rooms, Wednesday, March 12, at 2:30.

Oscar DeMoss, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. DeMoss, of St. Charles, Ky., died the 11th from complications resulting from influenza, he had recently returned from France. Six of his soldier friends acted as pallbearers. He was buried near Madisonville. Mr. DeMoss was a nephew of Mrs. S. T. Barnett.

THE VENEER OF THE YEARS

BY WALTER GREEP.

CHAPTER VI.

THE WESTERNER'S STORY.

When he returned from his breakfast in the dining car he found his seat already occupied. But as the occupant seemed to be genial and agreeable he did not seek another but sat down beside the stranger. He was a man of very large stature, Merlin noticed, with iron gray hair and pointed moustache. Not much of his face could be seen as he seemed intent on looking out of the window. His clothes were loose-fitting and he wore a great sombrero. This satisfied the young Kentuckian that his strange seat mate was a westerner of the genuine type—perhaps a cow-boy. So he sat and gazed in rapt wonder.

"Ah, hi, I must have stolen your seat," said the stranger, suddenly turning a pair of dark eyes on him so quickly he jumped with surprise.

"Oh, there's room enough for both if you don't object to my company," answered Merlin laughingly.

"Certainly not. Where are you bound for, young man?"

"To Smithville, Colorado."

"Relatives there, I suppose?"

"No."

"Friends?"

"No."

"Have you some business connection there, then?"

"Not as yet," answered Merlin, "but I hope to have soon. I am going there to look for a position."

"My young friend, I don't like to discourage you," said the stranger, "but I am afraid you will have a hard time finding a position in Smithville. And if you do, it would not be the kind of a place you would want to spend your life in. Temptations are so many there."

"But I can overcome any temptation!" declared Merlin as he had done once before in a flower-garden far away. He quickly noticed the repetition.

"I thought the same thing years ago when I left my home," said the stranger, "I was young then and full of dreams that have all come to naught. It is a sad story. Would you like to hear it?"

"I certainly would."

"Well, as you are a young man and in about my position, I will tell you the whole story though I wouldn't everyone. Perhaps you may gain something from my experience that will help you to succeed where I failed. At least it may cause you to be more careful than I was and not lose so much as I did."

The stranger sighed and looked out of the window as though trying to recall something. Then he turned back to Merlin and went on:

"When I was a boy like you I was very ambitious. I had tread in a great number of books about young men getting anything in the world they went after provided they had the necessary amount of ambition and perseverance. And I heartily believed this. As I had been born poor, in a little Georgia town, there seemed very little chance of my rising. Yet I was determined to make a success of myself. I set my aim to become President and started out to work myself up."

Merlin smiled and the narrator, noting this, smiled also. "It does seem a little bit ambitious," he said, but it is no more impossible for a boy in my circumstance to become President than for a country greenhorn to become editor of some large newspaper at the very beginning."

A cynical and curious smile was playing around the westerner's lips. Merlin looked at him very closely. It seemed they had met before. He continued:

"Well, in the little town where I lived, I had a sweetheart. I had known her all my life and esteemed her for her gentle nature and unblemished purity. Finally we were engaged. I gave her a small diamond ring and she gave a little ring to me as a token."

"About this time my ambition got the better of me and I decided I would go out in the world and do something. I was well educated for one of my chances, had a smooth tongue and believed the world would welcome me with open arms. My mother and father begged me to give up the idea but this only made me more determined. I vowed the home-folks were trying to keep me down in the world and did not care for my welfare."

"At length my parents withdrew their objections, and I prepared to leave. Before going, however, I made a vow with Miriam that we were to remain true to each other through life or death."

"Then I left. I went from my home to Chicago, and finding I could not make a go there, I went west. I had eight hundred dollars on my person—all my father's savings—and when I arrived I liberally tipped a miner for finding me a position. In turn he invited me around to a gambling house that night. Like the fool that I was, I went. The miners welcomed me with much show of brotherly feeling and drank my health in glasses of whiskey. Then they asked me to drink with them. At first I refused but being pressed, yielded. One drink followed another until the last I remembered someone was throwing me on the floor."

BROKEN-HEARTED. (In the movies.)

A woman clad in scant array
Peered out in the dusky night,
With eyes that glowed like burning coals
And a face that was ghastly white.

She stumbled down the rocky road
To a cliff overlooking the sea,
And gazing long in the swirling depths,
She laughed in mirthless glee.

"Oh, false and empty world!" she cried,
"Where in thy boundless part
Can I find rest for my tortured soul—
Pence for my broken heart?"

She clasped her hands and muttered
And raised her eyes to the sky.
Then tottered over the crumbling edge
With a wild, nerve-racking sigh.

The director raised his megaphone,
A scowl upon his brow:
"Liddle, take that leap again!
You're awkward as a cow!"

SOLDIERS PARTICULAR ABOUT POSITIONS.

New York.—Because soldiers returning from France are "very particular" about the positions they will accept, the task of placing them is much more difficult than obtaining jobs for civilians, Dr. George W. Kirchwey, Federal director of employment in New York State, declared today. The result, he added, that while 56 per cent, of the male civilians applying for work were employed, the percentage of discharged fighting men in the same category was only 38.

"You can lead a soldier to a job but you can't make him take it," said Dr. Kirchwey, summing up his experiences during January and February, when 9,915 demobilized men were aided in obtaining employment, in addition to 53,349 men and 19,037 women civilians.

Home-coming troops, the director asserted, regard the break which war has made in their lives as an opportunity to seek positions more attractive than those they formerly held. They are somewhat "gummy" of routine work as well, after their broadening and often romantic experiences abroad.

But many of the men, said Dr. Kirchwey, overestimate their qualifications, with the result that the bureau has been compelled to question their claims and establish a system of "trade interviews" to rate the applicants as to skill and adaptability for the work they wish to enter.

MUTE APPEAL IS MADE BY WOUNDED TROOPS FOR LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

New York.—In closing his League of Nations speech at the Metropolitan Opera House, President Wilson said:

"When I was in Italy a little limping group of wounded Italian soldiers sought an interview with me. I could not conjecture what it was they were going to say to me, and with the greatest simplicity, with a touching simplicity, they presented me with a petition in favor of the League of Nations. Their wounded limbs, their impaired vitality were the only argument they brought with them. It was a simple request that I lend all the influence that I might happen to have to relieve future generations of the sacrifices that they had been obliged to make.

"That appeal has remained in my mind as I have ridden along the streets in European capitals and heard cries of the crowd, cries for the League of Nations from lips of people who, I venture to say, had no particular notion of how it was to be done, who were not ready to propose a plan for a League of Nations, but whose hearts said that something by way of a combination of all men everywhere must come out of this.

"As we drove along country roads weak old women would come out and hold flowers to us. Why should they hold flowers to us? Why should they hold flowers up to strangers from across the Atlantic? Only because they believed that we were the messengers of friendship and of hope, and these flowers were their humble offerings of gratitude that friends from so great a distance should have brought them so great a hope.

"It is inconceivable that we should disappoint them, and we shall not. The day will come when men in America will look back with swelling hearts and rising pride that they should have been privileged to make the sacrifice which it was necessary to make in order to combine their might and their moral power with the cause of justice for men of every kind everywhere.

"God give us the strength and vision to do it wisely. God give us the privilege of knowing that we did it without counting the cost and because we were true Americans, lovers of liberty and of doing right."

HE FRAMED A SENTENCE.

The teacher asked the children to frame a sentence using the word "notwithstanding." Presently little Sam raised his hand, "Well, Sammie, let us hear your sentence," said the teacher. Sammie read: "Pa wore a hole in the seat of his pants, but not with standing."

PERUNA A Wonderful Remedy

FOR

Read His Letter

"I have suffered for the last two winters with that terrible disease, LaGrippe. Having often heard of the great value of Peruna I decided to try it. I have only used four bottles and I do not now have any bad effects from the Grippe as it has just about entirely disappeared, and my general health is good. I am satisfied that Peruna is a wonderful remedy, and I do most heartily endorse and recommend it for LaGrippe."

THE SOWER.

(Contributed)

This is the season when above all others our attention is riveted on proper seeding, soils, cultivation and seasons. There have been fruitless endeavors because they were ill advised or improperly directed. While many well wrought but plans have miscarried for lack of industry to put them over; while many another has failed because it was wrongly timed. Here is the time when co-operation is the paramount issue. You and God are to be partners and labor together. The yield will depend upon the faithful discharge of these mutual obligations.

He is to furnish the soil, seed and season, you are to plow, sow and reap. Either without the other will fail. You have his Divine guarantee that so long as time lasts seedtime and harvest shall not fail, "there shall be seed for the sower and bread for the eater," and no good thing will be withheld from them that walk uprightly."

But you of course are expected to do your part. Your part is to recognize Him in all of your ways and honor Him with the first fruits of all thine increase. If we are to expect him to open his hand of blessing we must be just and honorable stewards of his estate.

Purpose alone will not count, your good intentions must be carried out, to this end you have been endowed with intelligence and a will, you have time and talents and the open field of opportunity is before you. Have you wisely selected your seeds for the incoming season? REMEMBER WE REAP WHAT WE SOW. Men do not gather grapes of thorns nor figs of thistles. The seeds must have more than form, the germ of life must be there, else all your care will be bestowed in vain.

Then this seed full of latent energy must be sown—hoarded seeds die—OPPORTUNITY is its one appeal, give it a suitable environment, remove all obstructions, give the life in it a chance for itself expression and a teeming harvest of golden grain will reward your efforts. The sluggard knows nothing of the song of the reaper.

Then there is needed beside co-operation, continuous, sustained endeavor. We are not to "weary in well doing for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." Some run well for a season, but when the sun is risen it's a burning heat they are soon parched and dead, others put their hands to the plow, but because of the thorns and briars turn back. Others instead of removing the stones go stumbling over them through the livelong day; while others because the way is long and sometimes hard seek paths of lesser resistance. Only those who endure to the end are to be crowned. The hum of the reaper and the well filled barn are effects or rewards of the sweat and toil of timely, intelligent endeavor, but they are not the only rewards. There is health to the sower, and the refreshing rest after toil, the deep, abiding sense of duty done and these combined with the thought of increased power and efficiency makes the task a very inviting one. You will be compelled to dig and delve, but your partner is not unkindful of you. Nine Tenth of all is to be your share, the remainder he entrusts to you for the extension of the Estate, to be divided share and share alike later on. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread is the Divine injunction.

Then there is needed beside co-operation and sustained endeavor a just sense of the season. "Now is the time." Your future felicity depends upon the industry and intelligence with which you dispose of the passing moment. The time for sowing cannot be delayed. The whole of the Divine intelligence has been employed in perfecting its nature and in giving it a body as it hath pleased him. This nature we are to guard and intelligently guide if we would win the largest reward, among the thorns or on beaten in holding these seeds we are holding things of life. The Infinite has put himself into them and the care, intelligence and industry with which you tend them shows your manhood.

To throw them into stony ground paths bespeaks folly and failure, while the good soil readily welcomes and responds with Thirty, Sixty and an Hundred fold.

Then there must be intelligence in the selection of their place. The good soil so to speak is the mine where the bountiful harvest have for ages been stored. Every seed sown is your agent to collect this golden store and mature it for you. Just as the miner goes down and brings up the ore and even the Gems and as the bee distills her honey so these by the Divine alchemy transforms soil, seed and season, plowing, sowing and reaping into the staff of life. But this is not our only field or the only plane of our endeavor. God the Creator and Preserver of life has decreed that man shall not live by bread alone. His words like the good seed in good soil are to be hidden away in the heart.

The things we choose and the life we live determines the reproductive powers of the same. His word which is the seed of truth sown in a prayerless impenitent life is like the wheat among the thorns. No matter how great the sacrifice or service unless our lives are separate unto Him the die is cast, nothing but barrenness will ensue.

In this larger sphere co-operation, sustained endeavor, timeliness and intelligent acquiescence in the Divine plan are just as essential in the building up of character as are these other things in the maturing of a harvest.

The life that is no more than a play-ground for the world, is hard and necessarily barren. The mind that feeds on the sedge brush of sensationalism will be full of tangled sentiments, infested by thorns that prick the feet and prevent the harvest. While the life that is filled with self-seeking will become ingloriously filled with stones of ingratitude which means shallowness and no reward.

Then too we are Stewards of this estate. When we go forth to sow others beside ourselves are involved. None of us live unto ourselves and none of us die unto ourselves, whether we will or no others are being effected by all that we do. To turn our lives into a mere rendezvous for the world, to put forth no thoughtful endeavor, to prevent by indulging vile sentiments, to live on a material plane and hear none of the fruits of the Spirit is treason against not only our own souls, but is equally damaging to those about us. And it certainly means that the Husbandman is to labor in vain.

So that the season means more to you and yours than just another opportunity to grow some more corn, wheat oats and tobacco. It means that you are to get good and do good, you are to grow in Grace and in knowledge you are to perfect Holiness in the fear of God, you are to buckle on the whole armour of God and endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ, and at all times remember whose Son and Heir you are. Jesus said my Father worketh until now and I work, today the fields are white and the harvest waiting millions are hungry for the bread of life which your intelligent endeavor will give. The reward will be the Masters "well done."

Remember here as in the natural world there are two ways open to you. You can in a loose unguided way scatter these seeds among the thorns, among the stones or on beaten paths, but if you are looking for results here or hereafter, leave these and go for the good soil. You can spend another year sowing to the flesh and when it is over only a corrupted life, wasted opportunity and remorse will be yours, whereas if you sow to the Spirit the fruits of the Spirit which are love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, and temperance will not only gladden your own heart and enrich your own experience, but bless those about you. Amen.

PLEASANT ENTERTAINMENT.

(Rob Roy Special)

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Barnard entertained Thursday night in honor of their daughter, Miss Pauline's guests. Those present were: Mr. Thomas Barnard, of Decatur, Ala.; Misses Edna Black and Mildred Barnard, of Hartford; Pauline Barnard; Annie Williams; Lottie Burgess; Agnes Williams; Effie Burgess; Maurine Taylor; Clarissa Williams; Martine Taylor; and Julia Malin. Messrs. Henry Martin; Muri Taylor; Carl Stewart; Arnyon Herald; Alron Stewart; Guy Payton; Weslie Mullin; Otto Hurch Taylor; Claud Taylor; Henry Barnard; Sep Williams and Cedric Barnard.

A HOT SHOT.

The Secretary of the Bar Association was very busy the other evening, and, of course, was very cross. His telephone bell rang, he took down the receiver and yelled at the top of his voice, "Well, what is it?" "Is this the City Gas Office," came a woman's soft, sweet voice. "No, madam," roared the Secretary, "this is the City Bar Association."

REACH LIMIT IN ABSORPTION

Small Things Like the Turmoil of a Great War Cannot Disturb Chess Devotees.

To its devotees chess is the most absorbing of all mental activities, the game that above all others brings complete forgetfulness of the world to those who play and those who watch the moves, observes a writer in the New York Herald.

A striking example of this self-absorption has been shown recently in the rooms of a local chess club when distinguished experts struggled for supremacy in the mimic field heedless of the stupendous four-year struggle that was fast drawing to a close on Europe's shell-torn, blood-soaked horrid. What was the reckless slaughter of thousands of German soldiers in comparison with the sacrifice of a single ivory pawn standing guard before its queen? Which one of those who moved the pieces or of the greater number who watched them with furrowed brows and fast-benched hearts thought of the Kaiser's peace offer while the queen's gambit was passing before their eyes? The pope may lift his voice in words of solemn counsel, but they heed him not. The only ecclesiastical power that they recognize is that of the mitred bishop sweeping into the heart of the enemy's country and smiting the rock as it stands.

To read the printed accounts of this tournament is to recall the old Puck picture of two chess players carried in their chairs from a burning building with the board between them. Nor do we wonder at the fact that it was only while absorbed in his daily game that the exiled Napoleon could forget Sir Hudson Lowe.

EPIGRAPHS PROVE A PUZZLE

Explanation of Hieroglyphics Admittedly Very Old Will Surely Be of the Greatest Interest.

Amateur archeologists of California are endeavoring to interest professional scientists of the East in the epigraphs which abound on the rocks of Round Valley, not far from the city of Bishop, and which are believed to be as old, if not older, than the hieroglyphs of earliest Egypt, to which they bear a strange resemblance.

It is believed by many that the strange markings constituted the names by which ancient tribes marked the source of water supply for the benefit of those of their number who lived roving lives.

These hieroglyphs have never been deciphered, although they are matters of record in the leading museums of the country, it is said. The Indian tribes now living in the vicinity declare they are the work of the Indians of North America and that they antedate all aboriginal lore.

Some who have examined the strange markings in the flinty boulders say the hieroglyphs closely resemble those of earliest Egypt and may replace the latter as the first written language of humanity.

They are found always in the vicinity of water supplies, the same markings discovered near Bishop appearing also on rocks extending through the Canadian border, down through Washington, Oregon and California to the Mexican line and beyond. This fact, it is argued, indicates that prehistoric tribes marked a highway for their migrating members or for their armies, giving specific directions as to the best water supplies along the way.

French Live Stock on the Decline.

The United States food administration has called attention to the large decrease in live stock in France since the beginning of the war. In cattle this decrease amounted to 2,500,000 up to December, 1917; in sheep the decrease amounted to 8,238,000 head; in hogs to 2,860,000 head. In the period since owing to the food shortage there has been a still further shrinkage. Figures like these indicate that there will be a large and insistent demand for live stock from this country for the foreign trade for many years after peace is finally established.

Good American Family.

Thirty years ago a girl came to this country from Russia to marry Louis Flesher, an immigrant from the same country. They settled in Springfield, Mass., and when the United States entered the war they had four sons, the oldest 23. All of them entered the army and the eldest distinguished himself in battle. He is the young man who, having lost an arm and an eye while carrying ammunition through shell fire, optimistically exclaimed: "I'm the luckiest Jew in the army. Any other man in my place would have been killed."—American Israelite.

"Olive" ON.

Over 500 different types of husked rice or paddy were under examination last year at one of the government agricultural farms in Burma, and over 200 types of sassaparilla were grown at another. Hitherto much of the sassaparilla grown in Burma has been exported to Europe, where it is used for the production of the so-called "olive oil" for which France and Italy have long been famed.

Try a Tricorn.

Stop to think how often a certain clerk in the bakery department of a certain downtown store helps you to decide on a round marshmallow cake or a square chocolate in preference to a three-cornered devil's food.

"Look at the tricornes left again," snickered the white-aproned diplomat. "Never catch me rostin' for tris; too hard to wrap."—Indianapolis News.

DON'T THROW AWAY Your Old Tires

Conserve and Help Lick the Kaiser

THIS is to show you why "DRI-KURE RETREDING" with a 3,500-mile guarantee will save you one-half to two-thirds on your tire bill.

"Dri-Kure Retreding" is a proven factory method—not the old "kettle" process that soaks the carcass of your tire with steam, that, when cold, turns to water and rots the fabric.

"Dri-Kure" method is operated by DRY HEAT under 3,000 pounds pressure. The mere fact that racing drivers use tires cured by the Dri-Kure Process is proof that we build our treads for service.

Tom Alley, Chicago racing driver, averaged 104 miles per hour for 100 miles at Chicago Speedway, June 22, 1918, without a tire change and all on Retreded Tires. There's a reason.

Now Compare the Cost and Saving

Compare the cost of the tire you have on your car now and the cost of Dri-Kure Retreding, the same size. The chart of prices will show you the cost of retreading.

Now Figure the Saving for Yourself and remember that every tire we retread is guaranteed for 3,500 miles. Is this saving worth while? Think it over. Who wouldn't want to save from one-half to one-third of their tire bills?

We will gladly show you the complete detail and extend to you a personal invitation to come in for a chat. We will prove to you the success of this process to your own satisfaction.

A POOR START.

A gentleman passing a store a few days ago, pointed to a boy sitting some distance back from the front window perusing flashy literature, remarked that nearly every time he passed the boy was filling his head with that sort of stuff, and asked what could be his view of life—how he regarded it. That is something no man can tell, much less the boy, but it may be safely pronounced a poor start towards getting the right view. Let the industrious but indiscriminating young gentleman continue to fill up on backstairs society and cheap thrills, and if he happens to hold any view worth having it will be an accident.

The Equity Home Keeps Its Promise To Reduce the Selling Charges

IN 1914 the Equity Home Loose Leaf Warehouse was opened to keep the farmers from being over-charged for selling tobacco. We stated the that it was not our purpose to make a large amount of money, but that as soon as our house was paid for that we would only charge enough to pay the stockholders a reasonable return on their investment.

This year we have made enough to finish paying for the house and its equipment, and to pay our stockholders a good dividend; therefore, the directors feel that we should now reduce the selling charges. So on Monday, March 10, 1919, we reduced our selling fees from 10 to 2 (what the other houses are charging) to 10 and 1.

We have one of the best lighted and best equipped houses in Western Kentucky, and can secure our patrons as good prices as any house in the city.

We wish to thank the farmers who have supported us in this movement, particularly those who were willing to take some trouble to sell here.

In propotion to the size of our floor we have sold, and are now selling, much more than our share of tobacco.

Until our house was paid for we did not feel justified in lowering the fees, but now that we are out of debt we to assure our friends that if we find it possible we will reduce the charges still further.

When the command was given to go with your enemy two miles should he require you to go one, as a penal or sacrificial service, the roads in that country must have been of the type of those in Ohio County.

There is an old tradition among the old folks that as the wind blows on Ash Wednesday it will blow in the same direction for seven weeks. If so, we are in for winter with a vengeance, for it blow from the northeast. And it is bound to be so, for age always knows.

The war is over; peace is all but declared. Labor is plentiful and the prospect of a big crop this summer is ahead. And yet prices stay sky high and when questioned the dealers tell us they will likely stay that way for several years yet. We think not. The American people are not going to sit idly by and be buncoed when there is no earthly reason for it. If all the causes of high prices are removed, labor gets cheap and products plentiful, the people are going to demand a lowering of prices or know the reason why. War-time profiteering should at least end with the war.

Many Ohio County boys have made their appearance among us wearing the gold chevron, or mark of service overseas. These heroes who have breasted the German steel or felt the burning sting of the poison gas should be made to feel the place of honor which they occupy among us and be revered as the more fortunate, though not necessarily the greater heroes than those who only reached the training camps.

And the Kaiser is not to be tried. After all the bluster and bragado, after all the rip-roaring stump speeches in which he was held up to be the miscreant scoundrel that he is, with bloody hands and hellish leer, with heart iron and devoid of conscience, murdering women and children and burning homes; all of which is true. And after all this he has become the innocent ex-emperor of a deceived people whose culture is revered and whose aspirations are respected. A people who, having laid down their arms, still brag that they were never defeated. And all because he is a master, a lord and a ruler. There is no moral law by which they can try him. Perhaps not. Nor is there a moral law by which we can try the burglar who breaks into your house and after he has slain your children, gives himself up. Should he go free? The wages of sin is death. The Kaiser is the slumer in the ultimate degree. What should be his penalty?

It is amusing to read the English conception of Wilson and Lloyd George, how they laud the former to the skies and vilify the latter. There lies before me a letter from a well-known English pounder leader to a church paper in Australia, in which he tells of the love the English have for "Dr. Qilbon, the greatest figure of the twentieth century," a man of whom the pope said, "it should be called the Wilson century." He tells of how Wilson helps the laboring class; how he untangles the political threads of Europe; how he is the prophet of a new age, an herald of the very millennium. And in the same breath he pours out his vituperation against Lloyd George, says he is self-willed, a man who does not respect the parliament of a free people, who plays for politics and a good deal more of such venomous criticism as the American people—in some instances—have been hurling at the President. And at the same time we are praising Lloyd George to the sky! Verily, a prophet is not without honor save in his own country.

Marse Henry is in his dotage. The shadows are creeping up over his life even as the gray is creeping in his locks. It takes no tongue of the prophet to tell that. And with age comes the cynical scorn at all things modern and the natural tendency to become displeased with everything that is new to the customs of the halcyon days when he was in his prime. His vigorous thrust at the League of Nations, his continual harangue against prohibition and woman suffrage betoken his undiluted opposition to the progressive movements that are the natural products of an age that has seen the world go through Gethsemane and on to higher things. Though the old veteran possesses a power that transcends anything in present day journalism, his words are not to be taken as a criterion. The great writer grows old and languishes; the world moves on. What he believed fifty years ago we frown upon today—he believed in the slavery of human beings and the secession of states, else he wouldn't have fought for it—and yet these things would not command a following today. Time has told the tale. And so, years hence, a free generation shall look back upon the shackled serfs of ruin and thank God that they never had to endure this obsolete and ruinous product of a pseudo-civilization that has been long cast into the discard.

Wysox, Ky., March 10.—One of the saddest events of the year occurred at Wysox last Tuesday evening. During the high wind Mr. Robert Payton's residence caught fire and burned to the ground in ten minutes, entailing a loss of $875. Furniture and fixtures amounting to $140 were burned and only one bed was saved. Mrs. Payton was slightly burned on the hand while trying to extinguish the flame. A faulty fire was the cause. Mr. and Mrs. Payton were away from home but reached the scene in time to see their home go up in smoke. Mr. Payton has many friends who regret to hear of his loss in this disaster.

HENRY FORD PLANS A NEW AUTOMOBILE.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Further details of Henry Ford's plans to build a new automobile at a less cost to the purchaser than any automobile now extensively sold were published to-day. The new car will be built at factories strategically placed for economic collection of raw material and distribution of the product, Mr. Ford said. He is en route to-day to his home in Detroit.

As outlined here by Mr. Ford, his plans contemplate the early erection of a parent plant probably at Detroit or at some point in the Central States where water power will be available. This plant, he said, he hoped to operate within a year and then he plans to erect other factories.

The new company, which will be owned entirely by Mr. Ford and his family, was decided upon, he said, because of court decisions requiring him to disburse in dividends certain money of the Ford Motor Company which he had individually wished to hold as a cash reserve. Mr. Ford did not definitely indicate his future plans for the present Ford Company, of which he owns a majority of the stock, but said he would devote his time and efforts to the new concern.

"Smith says that he's looking for a job with a future."
"Well, he will be darned lucky if he has a future with a job."

HOW TO CHECK SPREAD OF DEADLY INFLUENZA.

First—All of the 2,500,000 people in the State are asked to be vaccinated immediately against influenza. While this inoculation, which is given in three doses a week apart, with vaccine furnished free by the State Board of Health, will not prevent influenza in all cases, it will prevent pneumonia, which caused most of the 14,000 deaths from this plague during the past year in Kentucky, say physicians.

Second—Everyone having a bad cold is asked to isolate himself in his room until a physician has pronounced the case not influenza.

Third—Physicians are urged to report all influenza cases for strict quarantine, to wear a mask when attending patients and to wash both their hands and face in anti-septic solution after visiting each patient.

Fourth—Anyone who has any reason to believe he is contracting influenza is urged to go to bed and stay there until his physician tells him he can get up. It was pointed out that when fatal pneumonia develops from influenza it is usually because the patient has persisted in remaining on his feet despite a high temperature.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Catarrh being greatly influenced by constitutional conditions requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine is taken internally and acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative powers of Hall's Catarrh Medicine that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. Owned Fine Library.

Andrew D. White, the eminent American diplomat, who died recently, was the owner of one of the finest libraries in America. Mr. White began early in life to accumulate books, chiefly on the subjects of the world's history. At last he had 40,000 volumes, a respectable total, as Mr. Birrell would admit, who once said that a man should never talk of his library until he had 10,000 books. Mr. White left his library to Cornell university.

MOTOR TRANSPORTATION IN THE ARMY AND IN BUSINESS.

By Christy Walsh
Lieutenant Motor Transport Corps,
U. S. A.

Trucks saved the day at the Marne—they saved the railroads in America and they literally carried the armies of freedom to victory overseas.

In America's first days of the war the truck manufacturers were summoned and told the needs of Uncle Sam. They responded with a willingness and an output that soon choked the highways between points of embarkation and such factory cities as Detroit, Allentown and Lansing.

Before the full possibilities of the motor driven freight car had been realized the high command of the American army anticipated its supreme usefulness by creating the motor transport corps—the newest and a thoroughly independent branch of the service.

Army engineers and officials of the war department had long been concerned with the question of transportation by motor truck. The limited but indispensable service rendered along the border and over the barren sands of Mexico was the first conclusive evidence of the passing of the historic army mule. The truck trains as employed during the Mexican expedition represented motor transportation in its primitive form. There were no stringent road regulations, no traffic signals, no inspection rules or schedules for time, speed and distance, between trucks, such as has been perfected in the now born Motor Transport Corps. But the great American truck made good on its initial trial—it delivered men to Pershing and it delivered supplies to Pershing's men—the two prime functions of motor transportation.

Light Truck Due For Recognition

The formation of the motor corps as an independent branch came in what might be called the closing phase of hostilities. It had not yet reached the height of its attainments nor had it time to embrace the many opportunities of truck delivery. The first great output of government vehicles was made up for the most part of trucks in the heavier class. These powerful carriers, in fleets of fifty or a hundred, did the work of twice as many mule-driven loads, in half the time. At Camp Johnston, Florida, the largest motor transport camp in America, the giant trucks accomplished wonders, over every highway in America they lifted burdens from the railroads while the destruction they carried to the Hun in France is written in the page of recent history.

But just as in the commercial world, there are some places and certain situations where the nimble light and medium weight truck is better suited to the war. The employment of gigantic naval guns in the advanced fighting zone where mobile quick handling and rapid change of position is the all-important consideration, presents the same objections as the use of heavy trucks in parallel circumstances.

Maxwell Truck Carries War Supplies 3400 Miles

Army men and chiefs of the Motor Transport Corps were quite aware of this fundamental and a few more months of war would have seen a great demonstration of the value of the lighter trucks. Officers in charge at Camp Johnston and abroad were eager for a great fleet of lighter cars to supplement the heavy trucks and go where the larger machines could not.

Data and figures of service were gathered from every possible source but there was no single performance that so impressed officials as the sensational journey made from San Francisco to New York by a Maxwell truck. Loaded to the guards with war supplies, shipped from Australia, en route to France, this powerful light vehicle started the transportation world by delivering its cargo in 17 days and 8 hours. Averaging 197 miles per day and encountering all the obstacles of a continuous 3400 mile trip, this sturdy light weight truck surpassed all existing records of motor transportation—if indeed it did not outdo the best effort of the average freight train. Democracy and the motor truck are the two great and permanent outcomes of the world war. No commercial organization with returned soldiers on its payroll will retain other than motor driven vehicles, for no soldier that has ever seen motor truck performance will be content until such economy and efficiency is a part of his employers organization. And as economy has become a byword of our new national life the lighter commercial vehicles, such as the Maxwell, are in great demand all ready. This is best demonstrated by the unparalleled interest and attendance at the current New York truck show.

99 PER CENT. OF SHELL SHOCK CASES RECOVERED.

New York.—Ninety-nine per cent. of all shell shock cases in the American Army in France completely recovered, according to Col. Thomas Salmon, of New York, chief medical officer in charge of such soldiers, who returned to-day on the Leviathan.

"There was less insanity in the American Army than in any of the other Allied armies," said Col. Salmon. "Only 1 per cent. of the shell shock cases had to be returned to the United States for treatment. Of the remaining 99 per cent. 65 per cent. recovered in field hospitals, 30 per cent. in evacuation hospitals and 4 per cent. in special hospitals for the treatment of nervous diseases."

Col. Salmon attributed the recoveries in the American Army to the high standard of physical examination required for all soldiers going abroad.

LACK OF FUNDS SERIOUS FOR NAVY.

Washington.—Failure of Congress to pass the emergency deficiency bill has created "a pretty serious situation" for the navy. Secretary Daniels said to-day. The most important item, so far as the naval establishment was concerned, was the $5,000,000 appropriation for the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, lacking which the Secretary said, important operations already planned would have to be postponed.

"It makes a very hard job infinitely harder," was the way Mr. Daniels described the situation.

The Secretary has called a departmental council of the various bureau heads as to what should be done. He does not believe that he has authority to transfer any surpluses to meet existing deficiencies.

"DRY" WORKERS OF ENTIRE WORLD TO HOLD CONVENTION.

Westerville, Ohio.—Prohibition workers from nearly every civilized nation in the world will hold a huge convention in Paris some time in April to discuss world-wide prohibition issues, according to an announcement made here at the national headquarters of the Anti-Saloon league by E. M. Cherrington, secretary of the league's executive committee. The exact dates of the Paris meeting will precede by a month an international convention of prohibition workers to be held in this country. The American convention will be opened in New York City May 20 and will close in Washington June 7.

Five hundred delegates from foreign countries will attend the convention in America.

HARRY LAUDER VISITS KENTUCKY.

Harry Lauder, the world famous Scotch minstrel and comedienne, was in Louisville and lectured to the Rotarian club Thursday. Mr. Lauder is well known to Kentuckians and his lecture was highly appreciated. His book, "A Minstrel in France" has been widely read by the American people. His son, John, was a Captain in the Scottish Highlanders and was killed in France during the early days of the war. Mr. Lauder's lively nature has been considerably saddened by this sad event, and he lacks the zest of his pre-war exhibitions.

RIGHT OF WAY BEING SECURED FOR RAILROAD.

Hickman, Ky.—John R. Bryant, planter, of Mississippi county, across the river from here, and a resident of Hickman, has returned from a business trip to Charleston, Mo., and states that the live business men of that city are pushing building of the Charleston-Hickman railroad.

One planter of that section subscribed $75,000 and gave the right of way through his farm. Others are subscribing in proportion.

HINDENBURG OFFERS SERVICES TO COUNTRY.

Zurich, Switzerland. — Field Marshal von Hindenburg has placed himself at the disposal of the Government in any action it may take to prevent a fresh invasion of East Prussia, according to German advices received here.

Tigers are extremely fond of bathing. In a zoo, if a tub be provided, they will eagerly make use of its facilities for abatement. They are first-rate swimmers, and in former days it was reckoned at Singapore that they "ate a Chinaman a night," swimming across from the mainland to get him.

'TANKS' TO BE USED IN LOAN CAMPAIGN.

Washington.—More than 200 fast American fighting "tanks" have been lent by the War Department to the Liberty Loan organization to be sent scurrying over city streets and county roads during the victory loan campaign as advertising features. Between twelve and twenty will be assigned to each Federal Reserve district, to be routed by district managers.

Each of the five-ton tanks, manned by two soldiers and armed with machine guns, will carry loan orators in addition. These machines for the most part were in this country when the armistice was signed.

He was a kind and affectionate husband and father. May God, the Great Leader, guide them through this life to a home in Heaven, there to meet Elmore where parting is no more.

The Confused Hun.

Dr. Thomas C. Ely of Philadelphia tells a story of his son, Lieut. William C. Ely, heard at Fort McPherson, Atlanta, which illustrates the heroism of the negro troops.

A German officer, taken captive complained that nothing could stop the Americans. They were not afraid of the shells, they defied the flame projectors, they advanced through fusillades of the machine guns of 280 to 300 bullets a minute.

"How about the gas?" some one said to the German.
"Gas?" replied the captive Hun. "It was no use to turn on the gas. It merely blackened their faces and frizzled their hair, and they came on just the same!"
